Harold, fella.....

I'm sorry I don't have the time to give you a long reply especially since one is required in detail.

My courses, LSU '68-'69 fall term:

History of Philosophy IV	3 hrs.
English, advanced comp. 101	3 hrs.
Geography I	3 hrs.
Geology I	3 hrs.
Geology Lab.	3 hrs.
Advanced Algebra, Sr.	3 hrs.
Introduction to Ancient His.	3 hrs.
TOTAL SEMESTER HOURS-	21

Required curriculum for foreign students entering Tel Aviv University for the first time. 30 HOURS:

HEBREW:
Speaking 3, Reading 3, Writing 3, Grammer 3, Literature 3, Scrip tures 3, Israeli Geography 3, Civics 3, Israeli History 3, Music

That ought to just about cover it, and explain why I don't have much time these days, and less for the future.

They just put me in an advanced English course today, and I tried to fight them on it, as its tough enough, but Dr. Schoul, the head of the Eng. department stuck me in it anyway, since my instructor reccommended it. So I'm preparing to either drop the course or "flunk" it. It's too damn hard, and I was happy with the other one which I was doing great in. That means a lot of people are going to be pissed off.

I don't know who will get my grade sheet, you or me, but I'll probably flunk out on my ear because I can't study around this place. It's like Grand Central Station in a looney ward. Hassels, distractions, raw nerves and a lot of crap in general.

So far I'm doing O.K. except hang ups in Philosophy which I've found I really dig.

I'll have to find out my school mail box number for you, so I'll have one less hassel around here.

Raul will split the country if Phillip comes back, the latest word.
